PASCAL JOLIVET Sancerre France 633

After World War II, the Sancerrois made a concerted effort to popularize the wine in the bistros of Paris. Their ingenious plan was to demand a glass of Sancerre everywhere they went. The plan worked. Today Sancerre is one of the most famous French wines in the world, not just in Paris.

MARTIN TESCH, UNPLUGGED RIESLING, TROKEN Nahe, Germany 361

The word 'troken' on a bottle of German Riesling is code for the bottle saying, 'I swear I'm not a sweet Riesling, I promise I'm crisp, dry and smell exactly like green apples.'

J.MOREAU & FILS, Pinot Noir Pays d'Oc, France 282

Pinot Noir is often known as the heartbreak grape among winemakers; its thin skins make it easily damaged. But those thin skins are also responsible for its coveted lightness and easy-drinking texture.

JEAN-PIERRE MOUEIX, Pomerol Bordeaux, France 681

Pomerol is one of the smallest regions in Bordeaux at approximately 3km by 4km. Production is limited and in high demand due partly to excellent quality and partly to its fame. If being served at Queen Elizabeth II's wedding banquet didn't make it a pop culture hit, then President JFK's declaration that his favourite wine came from Pomerol did.

No disrespect to the chef, but the tastiest mushrooms you'll have today are in this bottle. A noble fungus helps dehydrate these grapes on the vine, making sweet and tangy wines that smell like peach crème brûlée.
