Excerpts From the Autobiography of Johnathan Gold

Gunfire, an ambush and loud bangs surrounded him. He could hear his men shouting, firing back as he felt his heart pounding heavily in his chest.

Was this what he followed in his grandfather's footsteps for?

"I've got to get these men out of here."

Thought Johnathan Gold.

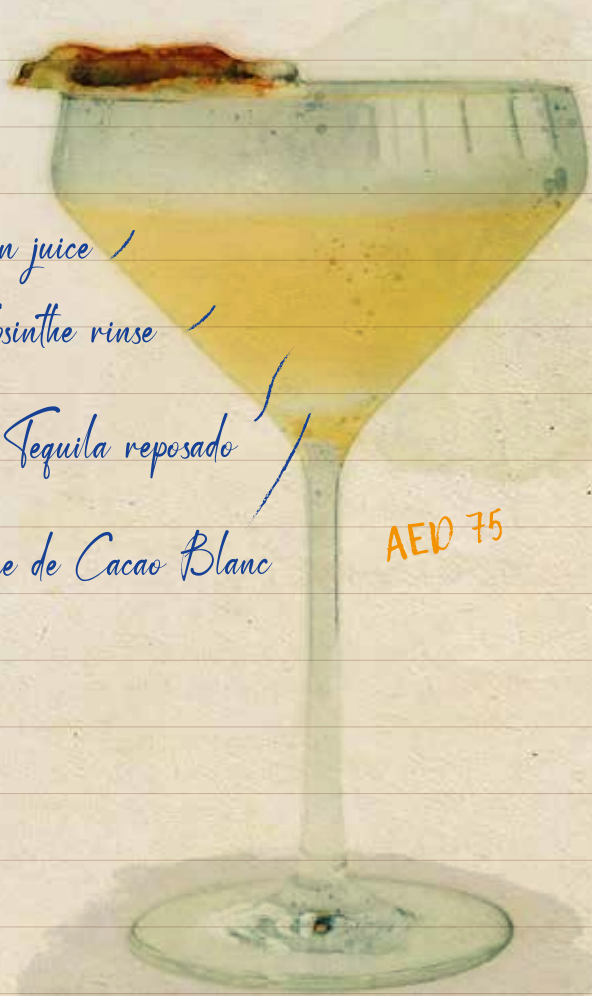

As he sprinted towards a wide tree trunk, he slid down to his knees grabbing his weapon and fired at the enemy. Suddenly, he felt a metallic pin graze his shoulder and felt himself propelled into the air.

With his ears ringing and pain shooting up his now broken leg, his vision blurred and the blazing sun did little to help his situation.

As the pain became too much too bare, and he slowly started to lose consciousness, Johnathan Gold looked up to see a large luminescent bird flying towards him whispering

"Find me".

It was a year later on Johnathan's 21st birthday when his grandpa presented him with a precious gift.

"A gold feather?!" asked Johnathan, bewildered.

"Yes. And I promise, you will never find anything like it"

"What am I supposed to do with it?"
asked Johnathan

"Hold on to it. Keep it safe. The day will come when you'll know what to do"

"When the eyes of a beautiful woman are set on you, there's not much left to do but to seek her out and find out who she is" he remembered his grandpa's words.

Her eyes piercing through him as he fiddled across the bar, trying to muster up the courage to approach her. Johnathan Gold never approached anyone in a bar before but he thought, here goes nothing.

"Hi, I'm Johnathan"

"Hola! I'm Paula"

A Ronin and Negroni

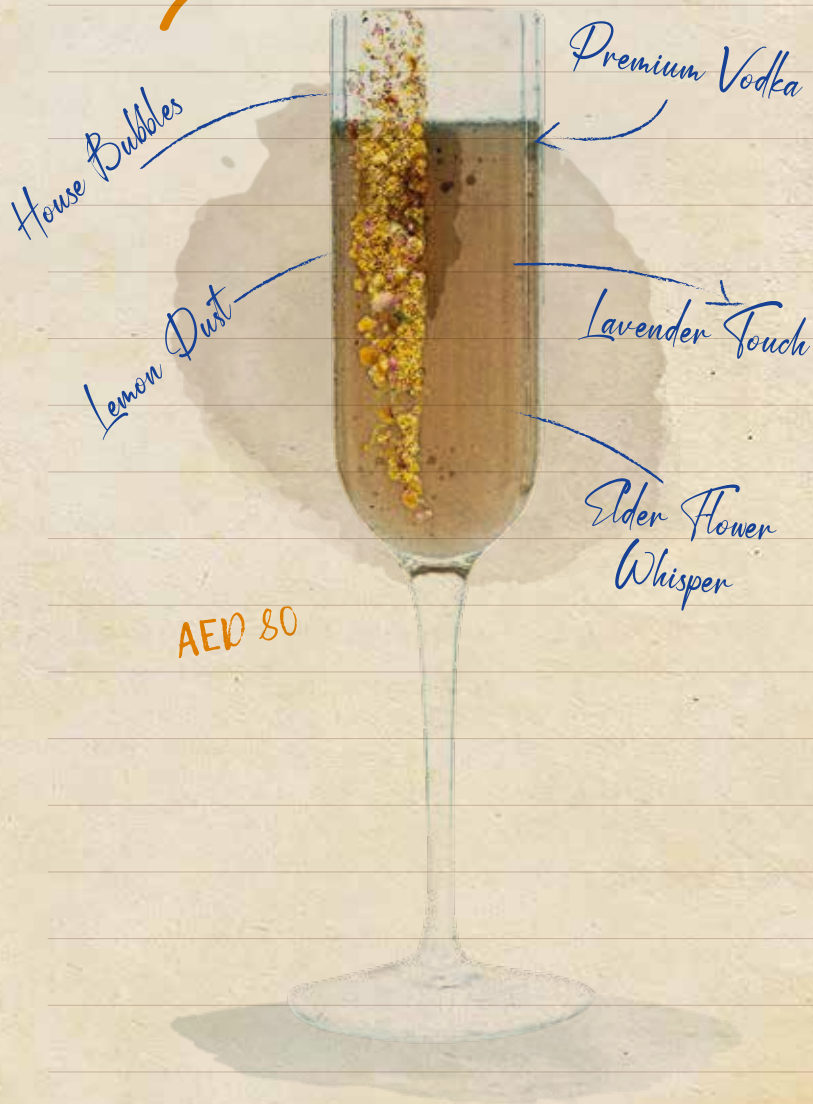

Tonight Paula needed a dance partner and she had found him.

Sometimes, love is nothing but a dash of luck and courage mixed with a lot of sips from a devilish Negroni. He thought as they swayed through the night.

A year later...

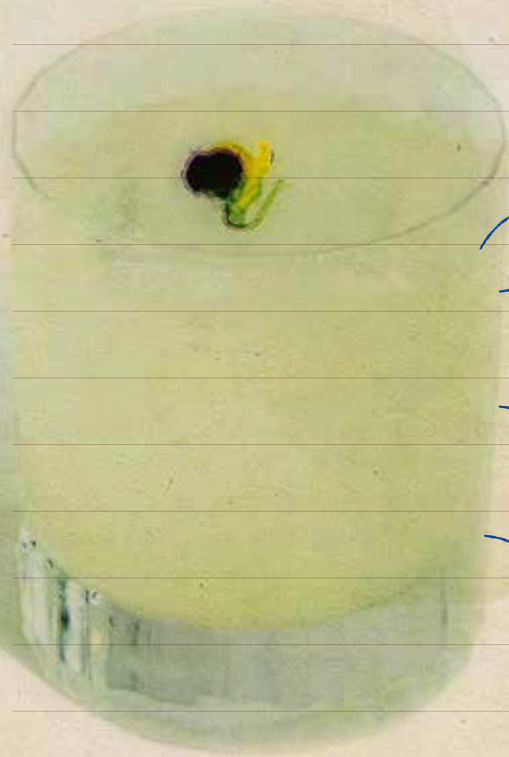

"Two champagne cocktails please..." Said Jonathan as he looked bewitched by his beloved Paula.

He now understood what it meant to be in love, but he still hadn't uttered the words.

The space between when you realize you're in love and when you say it, is always impeded by insecurity, doubt and uncertainty.

Johnathan Gold thought he lost everything in that ambush 2 years ago. Today though, he realized that not all was truly lost.

The fear that clogged his love had been lifted. He felt the freedom to be and say whatever he wanted and it was all because of this sassy, strong and troublesome love seeping through his veins.

"There's so much for me to tell you, but I didn't know how... my love was so deep and I didn't want to jeopardize it" Said Jonathan as he looked at Paula, holding her tight.

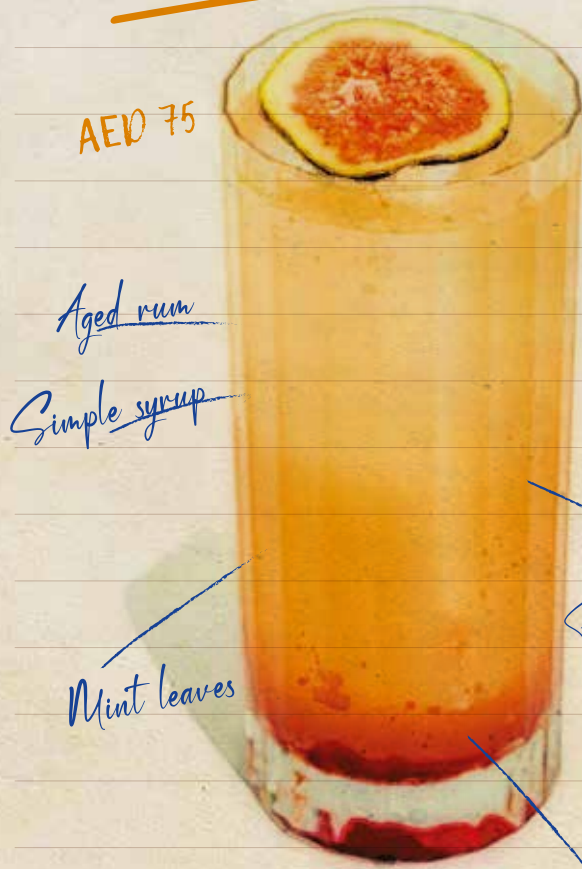

"Please don't. I can't do this, it's just not in the cards for us Jon." And with that, Paula stormed out of the restaurant as she left him behind, shattered.

The hardest goodbye could turn into the sweetest blessings, or so they say.

As the plane directed itself back towards the horizon in search of a landing, Johnathan spotted a familiar sight across the tarmac.

"It's that bird!" exclaimed Johnathan to no one in particular. "I've seen it before!!! "

As Johnathan had dreamed countless times before, familiar whispers and a renewed mission echoed through his soul and mind.

"Find me, Johnathan Gold. It is time" called out The Phoenix.

After landing in Papua New Guinea to continue his adventure, Johnathan Gold encounters a mysterious tribe sent to escort him to Pluma, the firebird of his dreamscape. Johnathan is led to the village priestess, who informs him that the legendary firebird is the spiritual manifestation of a long lost ancestor in the Gold family. Pluma's mission is to protect his heart after the events with Paula, and teach him about each stage of grief that one must go through after they have lost their way in love. After consuming 7 elixirs crafted by the priestess, 7 representatives from the elusive birds of paradise, appear in a lucid dream with a message of peace to help him move past his trauma and become the man he is meant to be.

Denial

The Fly Catcher declared; we ignore the truth to protect our comfort. It is hardest to accept that the blooming flowers of spring are capable of wilt and decay. One must accept that change is inevitable. If one does not adjust to the tide, they are doomed to be washed away. Protecting your judgment will protect your peace.

Lawe Breaker

Lawe's Parotia

Anger

Cry, forgive, learn and move on. Let the tears water the seeds of your future joy. Parotia allowed darkness to win which gave her a bitter view towards love. Her message is simple. Believe that what is meant for you, will never allow you to feel this way again. Open up and make room for the love you deserve.
