A PARISIAN SPIRIT

Built in 1863 as part of the creation of the Opera district, Le Scribe was chosen from the outset as the seat of the prestigious Jockey Club.

In 1871, the building was, for a time, the Parisian address of the famous Malletier Louis Vuitton.

In 1895, the Lumière brothers presented the world's first cinema screening while many artists and celebrities such as Josephine Baker made it their Parisian residence.

A key player in Parisian life, Le Scribe has now written a new page in its history in collaboration with Atelier Tristan Auer.

GUESTROOMS INSPIRED BY HAUSSMANN-AREA APPARTMENTS

A walk-in closet in a nod to the department stores

Designed in the style of a luggage compartment and a real decorative feature, the walk-in closet extends the experience by playing on the district's myriad window displays and shopping opportunities, accommodating guests' belongings in complete sophistication and offering easy access to all their clothing.

The fireplace is the centerpiece of the room

Drawing inspiration from Haussmann-era apartments, it fulfills a multitude of functions - a sideboard for storing items or simply its traditional purpose. The fireplace itself features glossy rectangular tiles, an illusion to our century-old metro. A mirror concealing a television sits atop the fireplace.

A Bakelite telephone

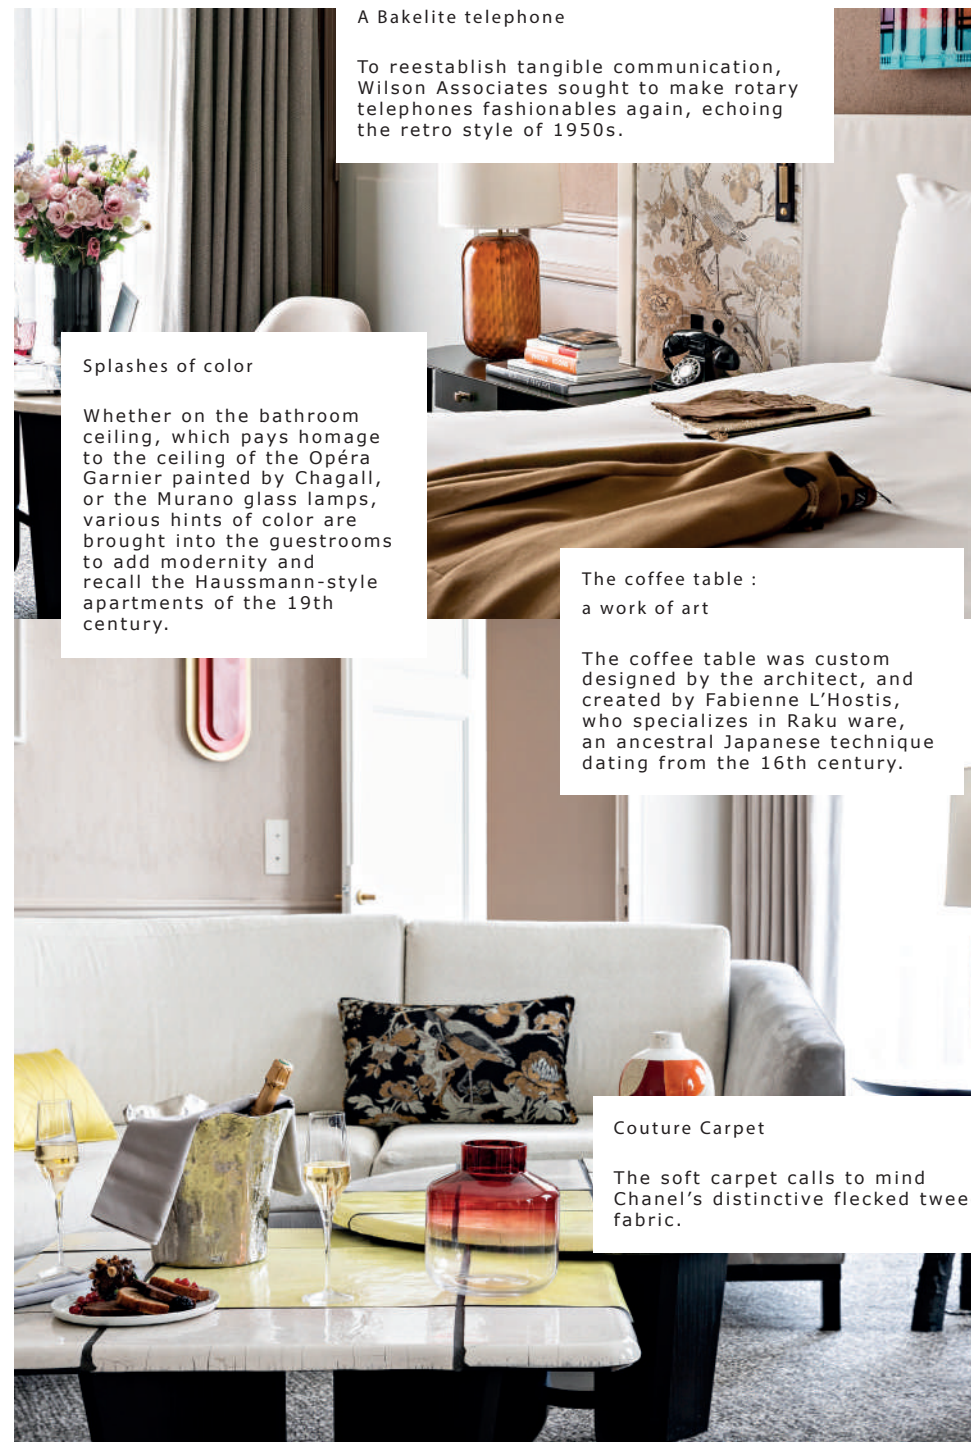

To reestablish tangible communication, Wilson Associates sought to make rotary telephones fashionable again, echoing the retro style of 1950s.

Splashes of color

Whether on the bathroom ceiling, which pays homage to the ceiling of the Opéra Garnier painted by Chagall, or the Murano glass lamps, various hints of color are brought into the guestrooms to add modernity and recall the Haussmann-style apartments of the 19th century.

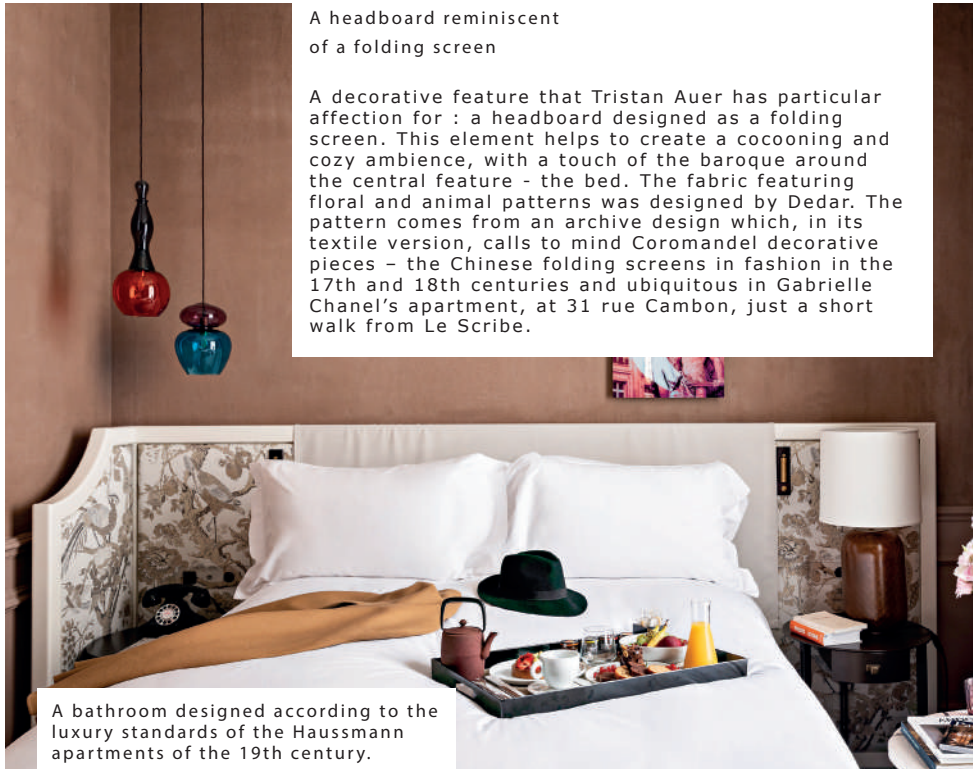

The coffee table :
a work of art

The coffee table was custom designed by the architect, and created by Fabienne L'Hostis, who specializes in Raku ware, an ancestral Japanese technique dating from the 16th century.

Couture Carpet

The soft carpet calls to mind Chanel's distinctive flecked tweed fabric.

A headboard reminiscent of a folding screen

A decorative feature that Tristan Auer has particular affection for : a headboard designed as a folding screen. This element helps to create a cocooning and cozy ambience, with a touch of the baroque around the central feature - the bed. The fabric featuring floral and animal patterns was designed by Dedar. The pattern comes from an archive design which, in its textile version, calls to mind Coromandel decorative pieces – the Chinese folding screens in fashion in the 17th and 18th centuries and ubiquitous in Gabrielle Chanel's apartment, at 31 rue Cambon, just a short walk from Le Scribe.

A bathroom designed according to the luxury standards of the Haussmann apartments of the 19th century.

From the terrazzo flooring to the colorful ceilings, from the rose gold fittings to the wooden ceiling coving : in the bathroom, a multitude of materials are overlaid: ceramics, marble effect...

Details and references

Taking inspiration from the district, the hotel's character reflects the neighboring architecture. Guestrooms are full of details that evoke the museum-filled life of surrounding area - coving, wainscoting, columns and a bust from the Atelier Prométhée, inside the walk-in closet.
