WEDDINGS

1910

James Northcliffe & Amelia Manners

£200 per person

In 1910, two young members of London's high society were dining at The Savoy Restaurant (now The River Restaurant); The Hon. James Northcliffe was planning to propose to his true love, Lady Amelia Manners.

As Lady Manners accepted, the couple, inspired by the excitement of their engagement and the captivating rhythm of the orchestra's waltz, quite spontaneously got to their feet and began to dance between the tables. So infectious was their joy that other couples quickly joined them, and a new fashion was born – this was the first recorded occasion of the 'dinner dance' and like many of society's most stylish innovations, it happened at The Savoy.

WEDDINGS

1936

Vivien Leigh & Lawrence Olivier

£240 per person

The Savoy and its restaurants have always attracted figures from the theatrical community. Vivien Leigh is reputed to have caught a first glimpse of her future husband Laurence Olivier in 1936 when they were both dining in The Savoy Grill, but at separate tables. When her companion remarked how silly Olivier's moustache was she objected, saying it didn't look silly at all – and that in fact she found him very attractive and promised her friend that one day she would marry Olivier. In 1940 she did, cementing their status as one of the most celebrated of Hollywood's couples of the era.

1946

Queen Elizabeth & Prince Phillip

£275 per person

The Savoy has played a key role in the romance of The Queen and Prince Philip, the British Royal Family's longest married couple. Princess Elizabeth had something of a crush on Prince Philip of Greece as a child then teen, and this soon blossomed into a full blown romance when they met again as adults. It was at The Savoy in 1946 that the couple were first photographed together at a wedding reception, but at this time, unbeknownst to the general public, they were in fact already engaged. A little over a year later the newly-weds attended their first public engagement, once again at The Savoy. This time it was a dinner where the wife of former US President, Franklin D Roosevelt, Eleanor Roosevelt, was the guest of honour.
